Building a lasting business requires the right people and the right space — in order to innovate and solve problems, attract and keep the best talent and help them work better. And Steelcase knows something about creating the right places for work.

Small and midsize businesses share a spirit of independence, initiative and a special sense of community — but each one is also unique. Businesses like yours often don't have the kind of partners that can help create a great place for your work and your people.

The design and selection process can often feel unfamiliar and complex. Many turn to websites or retailers that offer to help assemble a workspace. But while the output is an office, the outcome feels like a compromise. Whether it's a few chairs or a full office, we can help.

The Right Space

We believe that the best places to work support a wide range of workstyles across diverse environments and ultimately create connection and engagement. With insights that lead to smarter, human-centered design, we can help you turn your space into a catalyst for greater productivity, creativity and culture.

Workspaces

Great performance depends on hardworking spaces designed for individuals and teams — a place where heads-down work gets done and people stay connected.

Dynamic workspaces offer a range of desk and benching options that allow individuals to control their own privacy and comfort, while also enabling them to quickly connect with peers. With customizable elements, these settings can help promote various aspects of wellbeing, contributing to sustained energy and engagement that enables excellent work.

When you have the right tools to match the work, it's just easier to settle into focus mode. Task accessories are the unsung heroes of your desk — including arms that support dual monitors for navigating complex work, and lighting to help you see screens and documents clearly.

Workspaces

In an age of constant information and inputs, work can get too loud to be able to focus — literally. Having a quiet space with privacy is paramount to productivity.

Privacy solutions that block out the distractions of an active workspace help people feel protected, comfortable and focused. Whether the intrusion is visual, acoustic or both, having spaces like a pod or screened enclosure can be the answer.

Private offices can be strategic assets that enhance performance and trust in your business. Whether assigned or shared, enclosed rooms offer a quiet, multifunctional space for deep focus, mentoring and small-group collaboration. They enhance productivity by providing areas for individual work, confidential meetings and knowledge sharing.

Collaborative Spaces

Spaces that empower collaboration have never been more important. Whether together in person or hybrid, people and teams need flexible environments where they can interact seamlessly.

Informal lounge spaces aren't just hangout areas. They're thoughtfully crafted spaces that invite collaborative exchange. Not only designed for comfort, these spaces consider performance elements like privacy and power while supporting relaxed postures.

Collaborative Spaces

Conference rooms provide dedicated spaces for group collaboration, decision-making and customer meetings. But not all conference spaces are alike. Your business relies on teamwork and client relationships to stand out, and your meeting spaces can help by reflecting that attention to detail. Having a professional, well-equipped, conference space enables both efficient and effective collaboration.

Technology has enabled collaboration to happen anytime, anywhere. Every business today needs to be ready with agile technology integration that connects distributed teams, remote customers and other partners in dynamic work that brings the right people together.

Social Spaces

Community creates culture, and culture fuels success. Social spaces foster authentic connections between people, encourage engagement and create a sense of belonging.

Café and outdoor spaces play a vital role in building community by offering relaxed settings where people can recharge, connect and share ideas. Whether it's a casual chat over coffee or a breath of fresh air on a rooftop or picnic bench, these environments foster authentic relationships, reflect company culture and support holistic wellbeing.

Rejuvenation Spaces

Respite spaces give people a place to refresh so they can fully engage in their work. Designed for comfort, a variety of settings can provide the room to recharge, support mental health and respond to different individuals' sensory loads.
